Presentation Requirements

Presentation Organization

- Lead-in to the Topic: Main concept (definition).
- Reading Text:
  - Reading time.
  - Vocabulary (new words) & Quiz to check comprehension (Optional).
  - Summary or main ideas.
  - Reading exercises (activities).
- Discussion / Debate:
  - Debate: Two sides of the issue, OR
  - Discussion: Questions for discussion.
- Conclusion
- Q&A

Things to Keep in Mind

- The presentation should be interactive:
  - Ask the audience questions before presenting.
  - Ask them to actively do something (e.g., complete an exercise or respond to your questions).
  - (Note: Ensure you are clear about what you want them to do).
  - Get as much involvement from the audience as possible.
- Every member of the group is expected to present.
- The teacher will evaluate:
  - The content.
  - The response to the requirements (whether the group has included all main parts).
  - Whether the group actually understands the reading.
  - Whether the group can effectively convey their understanding of the reading to the class.
  - Every individual presenter's performance. (Presenters should not read directly from the slides, nor read from their phones).

Detailed Breakdown of Sections

1. Lead-in (How to transition into the presentation topic)

- Start with a hook:
  - A question: (e.g., Sibling rivalry: "Have you ever had a conflict with a sibling?"). The question should be engaging and easy to answer, not overly difficult.
  - Videos.
  - A short story or anecdote.
  - A short quiz or minigame.
  - Mindmaps: (Note: Not recommended / poor choice).
  - Surprising statistics or facts.
  - Quotes or pictures: (Note: Ensure they are legible and understandable).
  - Etc.
- After leading into the topic:
  - Introduce the group members.
  - Preferably, introduce the purpose and the outline/structure of the presentation.
  - Mention how long the presentation is expected to last.
  - Important: Clearly introduce the organization of the presentation (e.g., "Our presentation is divided into 5 main parts" and specify which section is presented by whom).
  - Inform the audience of the appropriate time for questions (e.g., "If you have any questions, please save them for the end of our presentation").

2. Reading Text

- Reading Time: Give the class 10 minutes to review the text. (Note: The presenters should have read the text at least 3 times at home).
- Vocabulary: Before or while the class is reading, provide them with new vocabulary.
  - The purpose is to help the class understand the content of the reading.
  - Prepare a list of vocabulary words with their meanings in English, ideally paired with examples like images.
  - Use the definitions from the textbook whenever possible.
  - IMPORTANT: If a definition is taken from an online source, the source must be cited.
  - Optional: Design a quiz to check the class's understanding of the new vocabulary.
- Summary/Main Ideas: Introduce the summary or main ideas of the reading.
  - IMPORTANT: Make it interactive! You must have interactions with the audience.

    - Example 1: Turn the summary into a "fill-in-the-blanks" game by creating gaps in the summary for the class to complete.
    - Example 2: List the main ideas and ask interactive questions to check the class's comprehension. Alternatively, have the class reorder the main ideas into the correct sequence as presented in the text.
- Reading Exercises: "Organize the reading activities."
    - Purpose: The presenters must design 2 games or activities to check the class's understanding and comprehension of the reading.
    - Presenters can use the questions provided in the textbook as a reference for their activities.
    - You can use information from the book to design games (e.g., PowerPoint game templates, Kahoot, Blooket, etc.).

3. Discussions / Debate

- Choose between hosting a discussion or a debate.
- Debate: Choose this option if the topic can clearly be divided into two opposing sides. (Note: This option is more challenging and time-consuming).
    - Divide the class into 2 main groups.
    - Ensure the debate has clearly established rules.
- Discussion: This is generally the safer choice.
    - You must prepare discussion questions (2 or 3 questions).
    - Questions must be directly related to the content and topic of the reading. (e.g., If your reading is about assisted suicide in New Zealand, an example question could be: "Should assisted suicide be legal in Vietnam?").
    - This should not be a comprehension test. Comprehension should be checked during the reading exercises.
    - You can divide the class into small teams and give them time (e.g., 5 minutes) to think about the question. Afterward, ask each team's representative to share their team's ideas.
    - Crucial Step: The presenter needs to summarize the ideas of each team and then present the group's own answer to the discussion question.

4. Conclusion

- Summary: Summarize EVERYTHING the group did during the presentation.
    - Example: "In our presentation today, we first introduced the topic using a video to warm up and lead in. After that, we gave you the definition of sibling rivalry. We also provided you with 20 new vocabulary words and a quiz to check your understanding of them. Thirdly, Linh organized the reading activity in the format of a Kahoot game..."

- Final Thought: Give a final thought or takeaway related to the presentation topic.

5. Q&A

- Invite questions from the audience (e.g., "Do you have any questions related to our presentation today?").

Post-Presentation (Teacher's Note)

After the presentation, the teacher will give feedback related to the presentation, wrap up the reading, and administer a mini-test related to the presentation. The average score of these mini-tests will account for 50% of Exam #2.
